Phase-II of surgery begins to separate Odisha twins joined at the head

The AIIMS doctors on Wednesday took up the second phase of surgery to separate the conjoined Odisha twins Jagga and Baliya. It started around 9am, and doctors said the surgery could take more than 24 hours in total.

"The twins were taken to the operation theatre at 5.45am. Surgery began at around 9am," said a doctor, adding that one of the twins developed a cardiac issue during the procedure, due to which cardiac anaesthesia team had to be called in during the procedure. The first phase of surgery was done on August 28. It involved creating a venous bypass to separate the veins shared by the babies that return blood to the heart from the brain. In the second phase, doctors are attempting to separate the heads and, if possible, close the skin.

Twins joined at the head are very rare, occurring once in 25 million live births, which is roughly the total number of births in India each year, neurosurgeons said.

Approximately four in 10 such twins are dead at birth and an additional three die within 24 hours. Since 1952, only about 50 attempts have been made to separate such twins across the world, with the success rate below 25%.

In the case of Jagga and Baliya, the doctors added, they are trying to save both children but even if they manage to save one, it will a great success.

Specialists involved in the surgery include Dr A K Mahapatra, Dr Deepak Gupta, Dr Manish Singhal and Dr Girija Rath among others. Earlier in August, a Japanese expert was also flown in to assist in the first phase of surgical separation of the twins.

The twins, born to Bhuiyan and Pushpa, farmers from Odisha's Kandhamal district, were referred to AIIMS in July . Multiple MRIs and angiograms were done to examine their brain structure before taking up the surgery .

At least one other pair of twins joined at the head is surviving without surgery in India. Sisters Saba and Farah from Patna are 20 years old. They were not operated upon because of the risks involved. However, in a recent case of successful surgical separation, surgeons at Montefiore hospital in New York separated 13-month-old twins joined at the head.

Barapullah: PWD secy `delayed' work

The Dialogue and Development Commission (DDC) of the Delhi government has blamed PWD principal secretary Ashwani Kumar for the delay in construction of Barapullah Phase III. Chief minister Arvind Kejriwal had asked the commission for a report on the delay . The project, which was initially scheduled to be completed in October this year, has been hanging fire for the past two years due to delay in acquisition of 8.5 acres of land in the Y a m u n a floodplains. The report, which was submitted to the CM on Tuesday , blames Kumar for the delay due to his "inability to take clear and firm decisions" regarding acquisition of land. In the 14-page report, DDC vice-chairman Ashish Khetan has said the process got delayed since Kumar kept insisting that land acquisition under the NHAI Act should be explored. This is despite the highways authority conveying that this was not possible. The file kept shuttling between various departments with no concrete decision being taken for nearly two years observes the report.

2017 stating that the rate of purchase "should not exceed Rs 35.2 per acre", the report said: "Kumar knowingly offered such terms of purchase that he knew have almost no chance of being acceptable to the farmers...if land has to be purchased through negotiations, the entire process would be stillborn if a seemingly unacceptable rate is set prior to any negotiations." Rebutting the findings, Kumar said the direct purchase option was explored but the rate quoted by farmers was found to be "unrealistic". "Why are they pushing for direct purchase of land when the farmers are demanding Rs 7 crore per acre? What is the vested interest," he asked. Officials say that unlike building department to acquire land for the project in July-August 2015. Pointing at the inaction of L & B department, DDC said, "It is difficult to fathom why the L & B department didn't initiate SIA (social impact assessment) in July-August 2015." The government notified the agencies for carrying out the SIA survey , as mandated under the new Land Acquisition, Rehabilitation and Resettlement Act, 2013, only last month.

"The report shows that they are completely ignorant about the land acquisition process, administrative decision-making and financial propriety," said Kumar.

The report holds Kumar responsible for exposing the "public exchequer to substantial losses on account of escalation in project cost". Recommending that appropriate action be taken, the report states: "Ashwani Kumar has apparently failed on several counts. It can thus be surmised that given his manner of functioning, lack of competence and absence of commitment, public interest is unlikely to be served so long as he continues in his present assignment."

Remains of 150-million-yr-old marine reptile found in Kutch

For the first time in the fossil history of India, the remains of a 150 million-year-old marine reptile were discovered in Kutch in Gujarat by a team of Indian and German scientists. The discovery of the 5.5-metre reptile is expected to provide some insights into the diversity and evolution of marine reptiles in the Indian subcontinent. Until now, no Jurassic era ichthyosaur fossils have been reported found in India.

The fossil was chanced upon during routine exploration in the Kutch region and the excavation of the skeleton took over 1,500 man-hours. The specimen is complete except for the posterior part of the skull, hind fins and posterior tail bones. Ichthyosaurs were large reptiles that resembled sharks and whales in their body shape and formed an important component of vertebrate life in the seas between 250 and 90 million years ago, at a time dinosaurs were ruling the land and pterosaurs the air. Based on a morphological study of snout, forefins, tail and vertebrae, the 152 million-year-old skeleton is identified with the Ophthalmosauridae, a family of ichthyosaurs that lived in the oceans

the latest issue of PLOS ONE. Members of the team included Professor D K Pandey of Manipal University , India, Dr Matthias Alberti of Institut für Geowissenschaften, Christian-Albrechts-Universität zu Berlin, Germany , Professor Franz T Fürsich, GeoZentrum Nordbayern, Friedrich-Alexander-Universität Erlangen-Nürnberg, Germany , and Professor Mahesh G Thakkar and Gaurav Chauhan of Kachchh University's department of earth and environmental sciences.

"The new find is very important because it is the first fossil ichthyosaur from the Jurassic rocks of India and is expected to provide insights into the diversity and evolution of marine reptiles in the Indian subcontinent and the former Gondwanaland," said Prasad. Prior to the present find, such fossils were known only from a few fragmentary and isolated remains (vertebrae and teeth) reported from 100 million-year-old rocks of the Cauvery basin in south India.

150 weavers to take part in three-day

NE festival

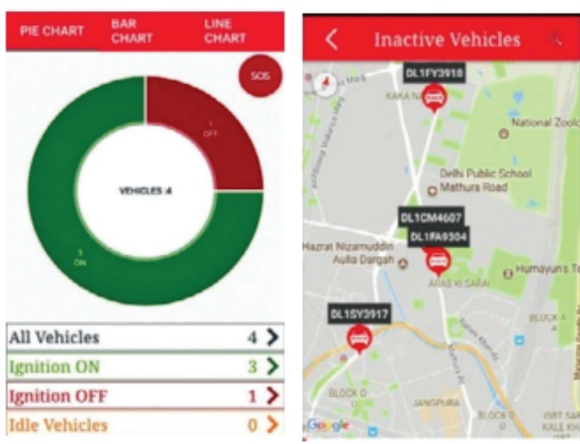

With more food, music and handicrafts, the annual three-day Northeast Festival in the city gets bigger this year. The fifth-edition of the festival will commence on November 3 and will showcase the diversity of the region, its culture and tradition. Over 150 weavers will present their creation along with 30 food stalls dishing out delicacies of the Northeast. For citizens of Delhi, they will be a rock band competition and a football tournament with top colleges from the city taking part in it.

Gone are the days when cops used to have excuses to bunk patrolling. In south and southeast Delhi, senior officers are monitoring the movement of the vehicles of patrol cops through a GPS tracker.

The technology shows the number of active vehicles in an area. A big advantage of the system is that additional cops can be sent to a spot in response to a PCR call, after finding the location on the map. The technology, designed by an internal team of Delhi Police, is a software based on android and iPhone operating system. In order to monitor the patrol vehicles, senior officers have to download the software on their phone and the GPS tracker will show the location of the vehicle, similar to the way it shows on app based taxi services. It would also make the police vehicles theft proof.

The software has been put to use at Nizamuddin police station on a pilot basis. Senior officers say that the patrol vehicles, including the motorcycles, have been fitted with the GPS device that is connected to the vehicle's battery. It even shows if the patrol vehicles have their ignitions switched off or on. The moment the driver switches on the ignition, the device becomes active. The speed of the vehicle, the location or whether the occupants are idling, everything can be monitored.

"The plan was initiated to bring in accountability for the ground-level policemen who have been deployed to control street crimes. Since all movement is visible to all senior officers, unnecessary enquiries about the positions of the vehicles can be done away with," said DCP (southeast) Romil Baaniya. Police officers say that so far 10 vehicles have been installed with the device, which would eventually be put up on other vehicles in the district as well. The department would install the GPS devices on all police vehicles patrolling the city eventually.

Baaniya said that the trackers would also be installed at the control rooms of the district. and in case of an emergency the senior officers can direct the nearby vehicles to a spot along with the PCR teams. "This will reduce the reaction time of the cops. The idea is to keep a track on where the assets are," he says.

The pilot project would soon be initiated at Lutyens Delhi and south Delhi

Lack of infra on South Campus makes these students dependent

Shorya Sood is a 21-year-old student completing his masters in political science from Delhi University . He has cerebral palsy , making him 80% disabled and wheelchairbound. This means, if he has to go up a flight of stairs or to the classrooms, his friends have to pick him up, along with his bulky wheelchair. Lack of accessibility, he claims, is a problem for disabled students like him on South Campus, who are being forced to depend on others for mobility . Sood stays in Dwarka and it takes him 45 minutes to reach his class on the campus. He did his undergraduation from DU and started his master's in September. "I use the metro to commute without any assistance from anybody , all the way to the university . But once I get there, I need my friends to take me to my classes," said the student.

His classes take place on a raised area, which he calls the first floor. The canteen, library and space for extra classes is on what he calls the ground floor. Only a few steps separate him and his classes, but it is a big hurdle for the student, who is stranded in his class if not assisted to move down the stairs.

He needs four people to pick him up with his wheel chair to cross the stairs.

"There are times when the classes get delayed or cancelled. When that happens, everybody either goes to the canteen or the library . But I am trapped. We really need a ramp here for wheelchair-bound students," he said.

Other students with disabilities use crutches to go up and down the stairs, sometimes with assistance. "I have written to all authorities asking for a ramp to make mobility easier. But nobody has ever responded," he complained.

However, dean of equal opportunities cell Bipin Tiwari said he had spoken to Sood around 10 days ago and brought engineers to the solve the issue in his presence. "We explored the possibility of putting up a wooden plank, but decided a cemented ramp will be more feasible. It will take us at least a month to get that done. There are about six steps between the ground and first floor. In the meantime, we are considering moving his classes to the ground floor," said Tiwari.

Sood now goes to North campus for his classes. It takes him 2 hours to commute. "By the time I am home, I am too tired to study . But I would rather come here than go to South Campus and be dependent on the goodwill of my friends," he said.

2,000 investors, Rs 800cr paid, not a brick laid

Eight years ago, a large residential-cum-commercial project, the kind that have sprung up across Gurgaon and other parts of NCR over the years, was launched in Manesar. It got nearly 2,000 buyers, who saw their investments taking concrete shapes on a 104-acre plot. But today , the barren plot is all they have to look at.

The project, Aditya Niketan, never took off. Collectively, the investors say they have paid a whopping Rs 800 crore to the developer, ABW infrastructure Ltd. And they are worried their money will sink because the plot is mired in litigations, a CBI probe into deals for the land is on, and an RTI reply has informed them the developer did not acquire approvals or licence for the project.

ABW Manesar Allottee Welfare Society, the association of buyers, claimed 1,974 allottees had paid Rs 800 crore as well as Rs 45 crore as external and internal development charges to the Haryana government through the developer for ABW Aditya Niketan, the township was to come up in Sector M1.

Three FIRs have, meanwhile, been filed against the developer, two by homebuyers and one by the department of town and country planning (DTCP), in 2016. But these have failed to provide any relief to the buyers till now. The developer could not be reached for comment.

"At the time of booking, the developer assured us they had all necessary approvals from the government and the land for the township had been legally acquired," said Naresh Jindal, who represents the buyers' association. Years after making the booking, buyers say they came to know through an RTI the developer did not have required approvals for zoning and building a shopping mall inside ABW Aditya Niketan and the licence to develop the township had expired in 2009.

Poachers opt for new methods to trap endangered Chinkaras

JAIPUR: The chinkara or the Indian gazelle continues to be poached in Rajasthan for meat mainly by the Bawariya community allegedly at the behest of wealthy locals, mostly Rajputs.

A dozen of them have been hunted so far in 2017 in Bikaner district. Jodhpur and Jaisalmer each register about six to ten cases of chinkara poaching every year, according to data from wildlife department but activists allege that the actual numbers are twice or thrice than those reported.

The poaching goes on despite the chinkara's status as an endangered animal with highest protection under Schedule 1 of the Wildlife Protection Act, 1972.

Surprisingly, poaching is rampant in a region with a large population of Bishnoi community, which zealously protects animals and trees, and despite the Bishnois brutally assaulting hunters when they are caught.

The poachers, who usually hunt at night, have resorted to other means of hunting as gunshots alert villagers, says Rampal Bishnoi, a conservationist from Jodhpur. "They place a tape recorder playing the sound of a chinkara fawn and hide nearby," says Rampal.

When the chinkaras come, the poachers emerge from the hiding and strike at the legs of the animal with sticks, crippling one or two, who are then beaten to death.
