3 dozen vehicles pile up on e-way; HC has made LG Viceroy of British govt, says AAP

One person was killed and 27 were injured in two separate pileups involving 34 vehicles on Yamuna Expressway on Wednesday morning. According to police, low visibility due to thick smog is believed to be the reason behind the two accidents in Mathura and Gautam Budh Nagar districts. In the first incident that was reported from milestone number 125 near Mathura's Hataura village, an overloaded truck rammed into a stationary car from behind around 6.30 am. The area comes under Baldeo police jurisdiction. Mathura ASP (rural) Aditya Kumar Shukla said, "As many as 21 vehicles heading towards Agra piled-up in the accident. While one person died, 21 others sustained injuries and were rushed to nearby hospitals. Three of them were critical and were referred to Delhi for treatment." Mahavan police station incharge G P Singh, who was one of the first cops to reach the accident spot, said, "The truck was overloaded with apples and it overturned immediately after hitting the car. Due to very low visibility, several other light and heavy vehicles piled-up on the spot." In the second incident reported near Dankaur in Gau tam Budh Nagar, about eight km from Zero Point at the central verge of the expressway, six people were injured after 13 vehicles collided with each other on both sides of the e-way. The motorists could not spot traffic diversion at the point, where construction work of Eastern Peripheral Expressway (EPE) is taking place. Most occupants in the cars and buses, however, escaped with minor injuries. Two foreigners going from Agra to Delhi also received minor injuries and were discharged after first aid. Due to the two accidents, traffic came to a standstill on the expressway and police and e-way personnel used cranes to clear the stranded vehicles. Meanwhile, in Aligarh and Agra, three people died and 12 were injured in six different road accidents due to poor visibility. In Agra, two truck drivers lost their lives after their vehicles collided with each other near South Bypass on Delhi-Gwalior Road. In Aligarh, one person was reported dead and 12 were injured in five different accidents. A pileup involving six vehicles was also reported from NH-2 near Kotwan in Mathura district. However, no one was injured in the accident.

New Delhi Making light of the 'corrupt' tag fastened on him by AAP in 2014, Congress leader and senior advocate P Chidambaram appeared for the Arvind Kejriwal government in the Supreme Court on Wednesday and pleaded for safeguarding its constitutionally conferred right to govern the national capital territory of Delhi without nagging interference from Centre through LG. During his first stint as chief minister, Kejriwal had in January 2014 made public a list of most dishonest politicians which included Chidambaram as well as top leaders of Congress and opposition parties. Kejriwal had also questioned huge amounts of money spent by Narendra Modi and Rahul Gandhi for image building. Appearing for the Delhi government before a bench of Chief Justice Dipak Misra and Justices A K Sikri, A M Khanwilkar, D Y Chandrachud and Ashok The ex-finance minister said

Indian Constitution, its framers as well as the Constituent Assembly debates, unmistakably point towards a single most important constitutional mandate - supremacy of elected representatives and cabinet form of government. "If Parliament decided to add Article 239AA to set up a legislative assembly in Delhi to enable people to elect their representatives to form a government, it could not be the wish of Parliament to either diminish or erode the most important constitutional mandate - cabinet form of government," he said. He also said: "Interpretation of any constitutional provision or a constitutional amendment must not diminish the importance and supremacy of democratic form of government. Interpretation by court must advance and enrich democracy, which is of the people, by the people and for the people."

Patients queue up at hospitals

Prahlad, a 38-year-old marketing executive in a private company, has been gasping for breath since past few weeks. On Wednesday, as the pollution level picked up further in the capital, Prahlad's condition worsened. He began to cough frequently and complained of headache. And he is not alone - more and more apparently healthy people working outdoors are turning up at health facilities with similar conditions. Physicians and pulmonologists say every second patient is complaining about chest tightness, breathlessness and burning sensation in the eyes - all caused by pollution. Nilanjana Gupta, who works in Dubai, said she had been put on inhalers and other medications. "When I was abroad, I didn't have any breathing difficulty. Delhi's air is so toxic, it is almost difficult to breathe," Gupta said. A few minutes in the polluted air can cause allergy, eye irritation, sore throat, cough and difficulty in breathing along with headache, sleepiness, lowered alertness, nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain. Over a period, it may trigger respiratory problems like asthma, bronchitis, damage to lung tissues, poor lung function and even lung cancer. It may also lead to heart disease, stroke, high blood pressure, palpitation, diabetes, anxiety, depression, stress and shortened lifespan, say experts. AIIMS director Dr Randeep Guleria compared the situation in Delhi with Great Smog of 1952 in London - a severe air pollution situation that led to the deaths of over 4,000 people. Pollution is at such a severe level that patients with respiratory and cardiac problems may develop life-threatening conditions, he said. "This is a silent killer." Safdarjung Hospital has also witnessed an increase in such patients at OPDs and casualties over the past two days, said the professor and head of pulmonary medicine, Dr J C Suri. "Elderly people and children are more likely to develop infections and allergies due to smog and pollution. They should avoid going out during the early morning and at dusk hours when the toxic level is at its peak," he said. Dr Rommel Tickkoo, senior consultant (internal medicine) at Max Hospital, Saket, and Dr Arunesh Kumar, senior consultant (pulmonology), Paras Hospitals, said there was more than 20% increase in the number of patients with pollution-related health issues. "People should avoid outdoor activities and, if urgent, they should wear masks to avoid contaminated air," Dr Kumar said. While Indian Medical Association termed the current crisis a public health emergency, the Union health ministry issued a public advisory suggesting people to remain indoors, if possible. The Delhi government also released a health advisory urging Delhiites to use carpooling and public transport, stay indoors and not to smoke.

The study says management of crime statistics by police functionaries is linked to performance appraisals and this was an important reason for non-their discontent. It adds that "there was a tradition to touch feet of a person in authority or senior in rank (in UP police). In police stations also, generally

Varsities, schools search for answers

Private universities in the National Capital Region are working overtime to ensure that their campus community are able to tolerate the poor air quality. For senior school students, however, the choice was either to absent themselves from school or bear the brunt of the toxic air. At Ashoka University, officials claimed that nearly half the students availed of masks made available to them by the university on Wednesday. Ali Imran, vicepresident, external engagement, said, "Ashoka University's Environment Society has made masks available to students. We are also keeping our grounds watered to settle the dust." At OP Jindal Global Univer sity, the university health centre issued internal advisories to its students, faculty and staff and the office of student welfare on steps required to deal with any emergency health issues and made masks available for students and staff. There was zero visibility on these campuses on Tuesday night, and videos of students coming out from their halls of residences with mobile flash lights did the rounds in social media. The corridors too were filled with smog and many students complained of throat irritation and burning sensation in their eyes. Eye irritation was also a common complaint among senior school students, who, unlike primary school counterparts, still need to attend class. Kumar, the father of a Class VIII student at St Michael's School, said, "Though their sports days and annual day practices have been cancelled, the kids must come to school and study for the exams. They stay in the classroom, so are protected." However, attendance on Wednesday was poor, with Springdales School recording just 50% presence in Class XI. "Mostly those with younger siblings on holiday didn't turn up," said Mala Gupta, teacher in charge of Class XII. Due to the bad air, morning roll call was taken in the buses instead of the school group. At Bluebells School too, principal Suman Kumar said, "We only had 75% attendance today."

Few students who dared the haze seemed to have taken antipollution precautions, with most of them using their handkerchiefs or ties as masks. Priyansh Alex, a Class VI student at Bluebells, however, had a mask. "I have been using this mask for two weeks now," the youngster said. Harminder Singh, father of two girls studying in Frank Anthony Public School, rued he had not got masks for his daughters, but "will buy them soon because the situation is worsening".

parents worried about the health hazards represented by the smog. "Why are older kids still being told to come to school in this pollution?" asked a parent waiting outside the Government Senior Secondary School on Mata Sundri Road. Children outside the school could be seen trying to filter the bad air with handkerchief masks. Other parents, though worried, rationalised that children would not study if they stayed home. 75% of the population avoids reporting a crime as they feel unhappy with the way cops behave with complainants, especially women and marginalised sections, a study on "Non-registration of crimes: Problems and solutions" has stated. The study conducted by a team led by Dr Arvind Tiwari of Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS), Mumbai, for the Bureau of Police Research and Development (BPR&D), concludes that treatment of women complainants needs considerable improvement and that the poor do not get a fair shake. Police seems to be "overlooking" illiterate and poor people and 33% of their complaints were either registered as non-cognisable offences and 25% as daily diary (DD) entries. They were not apprised of fate of their complaints either.

registration of crimes. "Burking (smothering) of crime is rampant all over," it says, adding that if non-registration of crimes is computed, it may mean that less than 10% crimes are being registered. About political influence as a reason for the reluctance of the police to register cases, the study says, "The crime graphs have had negative impact on the performance of not only the police but also governments in power. In certain states, the political executives openly insisted on burking of crime in order to show lowering of crime." The research cites the example of BSP leader Mayawati stating that as chief minister of Uttar Pradesh, she suspended senior officers for inability to control crime. The study particularly comments on Uttar Pradesh that there is a lot of interference from local-level politicians and duty officers (in police stations) are vocal about difference between them. After talking to several police officers, general public, lawyers, judges, NGOs and media persons, researchers found that "victims usually nurse a grudge against the police that gravity of their cases were either reduced or made into non-cognisable, in a bid to control the crime graph". The non-cognisable and cognisable offences are classified separately according to Criminal Procedure Code (CrPC). The study says the nicety of this classification is not known to an average citizen and sometimes even educated ones, leading to police minimising the complaint. Another major problem cited for non-registration of crimes is lack of adequate manpower and heavy workload in police stations, which prompted the cops to avoid more work by registering all the crimes. "Strangely, but as a matter of fact, police continue to be under
